About Indiana . . .

Governor - Frank O' Bannon

Lieutenant Governor - Joseph Kernan

State name - Indiana's name was chosen by Congress in 1800. It means "the land of the Indians."

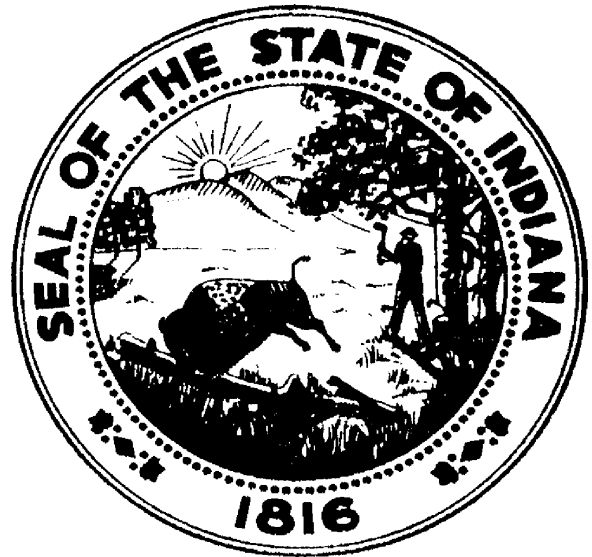

State flag - The Indiana flag has 19 gold stars and a gold torch on a blue field. The torch represents liberty and enlightenment with the rays reflecting far-reaching influence. The stars in the outer circle represent the 13 original states; those in the inner circle are for the five states next admitted to the Union. The star above the torch stands for Indiana, the 19th state. The flag was adopted in 1917.

State motto - "The Crossroads of America"

State stone - Indiana limestone

State song - "On the Banks of the Wabash, Far Away" by Paul Dresser

State nickname - The Hoosier State

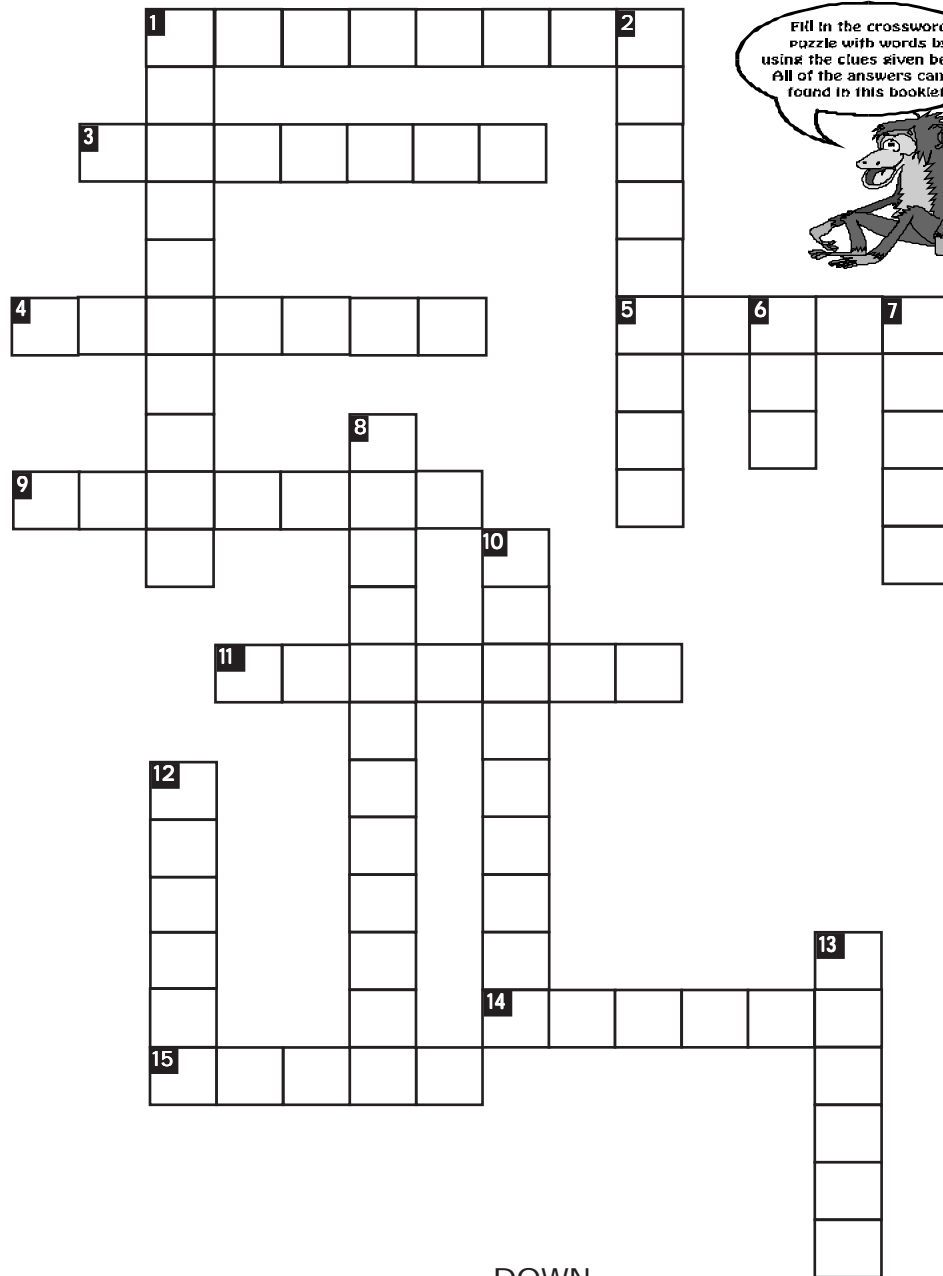

State seal - The seal shows a pioneer woodsman chopping a tree while a buffalo runs across the plains.

State capital - Vincennes was the first territorial capital from 1805 to 1813 following the creation of the Indiana Territory.

Corydon followed Vincennes as capital from 1813 to 1825, and was capital when Indiana became a state in 1816.

Indianapolis became capital of the state in 1825.

Law-Making Maze

START

BILL INTRODUCTION
The first step in creating a law is for a representative or senator to write the bill. Then the bill is read by the author in either the House or the Senate.

Follow the path through the maze to find out how a bill becomes a law!

CONFERENCE COMMITTEE

After the bill has been considered by both chambers, one of three things can happen: (A) The bill can be approved without changes; (B) The bill can be changed in the second chamber. If this happens, it must be returned to the first chamber so the changes can be approved. If at least 51 of the Representatives or 26 Senators agree to the changes, the bill goes on to the governor. However, if the majority of the original chamber disagrees with the amendments, the bill is sent to a conference committee. A conference committee is made up of two representatives and two senators. The four legislators attempt to combine the two different versions of the bill so that they all can agree. If they can agree, a conference report is then voted on by both the House and the Senate. If both houses approve the amended bill, it is sent to the governor. Otherwise the bill cannot become a law; or (C) The second chamber defeats the bill by not voting on it, defeating it by a vote in committee, or defeating the bill through a vote of the entire chamber.

THE GOVERNOR

Once a bill gets to this point, the governor can either sign the bill into law, veto the bill, or do nothing. If the governor does not act within seven days, the bill automatically becomes law without a signature.

FIRST READING

The bill is presented to the House or the Senate. Then the Speaker of the House or the President of the Senate (depending on whether the bill's author is a Representative or Senator) assigns it to a committee.

COMMITTEE READING

The committee's responsibility is to decide what is good about a bill as well as talk about any changes that could be made. Anyone can attend a committee meeting to say what they like or don't like about a bill. After the committee meeting is over, the members report back to the House or Senate. If the committee does not vote or votes against the bill, the bill cannot become a law.

THIRD READING

At this stage, the full House or Senate will talk about what is good and not so good about a bill. Then legislators will vote to pass or defeat the bill. A majority of at least 51 votes are needed for the bill to be passed in the House; at least 26 in the Senate. If the bill is passed, it is sent to the other chamber, where everything starts all over. If not enough people vote to pass the bill, it cannot become a law. Both the House and the Senate have to go through the same process before a bill can become a law.

SECOND READING

When the bill is brought before the House or Senate for a second reading, legislators have the opportunity to ask for amendments to the bill. The Senators or Representatives may or may not get what they ask for.

VETO OVERRIDE

Even if the governor vetoes a bill, it can still become a law if 51 representatives and 26 senators vote to override the governor's veto.

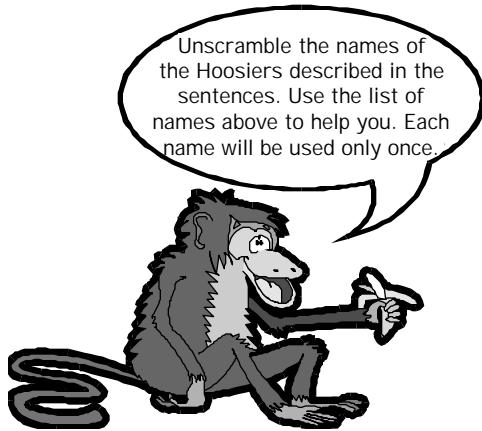

IF A BILL MAKES IT THIS FAR, IT BECOMES A LAW!!!

Governors of Indiana

1800 - 1997

William Henry Harrison, May 13, 1800 - December 28, 1812

The first governor of Indiana, while it was still a territory but not a state, was William Henry Harrison. He was born in Virginia in 1773 to Benjamin Harrison, whose signature is on the Declaration of Independence. As a politician and military man, he served as governor of the Indiana Territory for 12 years before being elected as President of the United States in 1840. His grandson, Benjamin Harrison, also held the office of President. Harrison died in 1841.

John Gibson, July 4, 1800 - January 10, 1801 & June 1812 - May 1813

Born in Pennsylvania in 1740, John Gibson spent his military career living with and learning the customs of Indians in Virginia. During his political career, he was active in Indiana's negotiations with the Native Americans. He was acting governor twice during Harrison's administration when the governor was called away on military duty, finishing out Harrison's term after he resigned in 1812, and filling in until the next governor, Thomas Posey, who was elected in March of 1813, was able to take office in May of that year. After the formation of state government in 1816, Gibson returned to Pennsylvania where he died in 1822.

Thomas Posey, March 3, 1813 - November 7, 1816

Born in Virginia in 1750, Thomas Posey was appointed as governor of Indiana Territory in 1813, following Harrison's resignation. He died in 1818 after a long military and political career.

Jonathon Jennings, November 7, 1816 - September 12, 1822

Jonathon Jennings was the first governor elected after Indiana became a state. A politician and a lawyer, he was born in New Jersey in 1784. He served in Congress for six years and helped frame Indiana's constitution. He died in 1834.

Ratliff Boone, Democrat, September 12, 1822 - December 5, 1822

Ratliff Boon was Lieutenant Governor under Jennings, and served out Jennings' unexpired term as Governor. He was born in 1781 and had a long political career which included 12 years in Congress. He was also Lieutenant Governor under William Hendricks.

William Hendricks, Democratic-Republican, December 5, 1822 - February 12, 1825

A lawyer and politician, William Hendricks was born in Pennsylvania in 1782. He established The Eagle, Indiana's second newspaper, in 1812. During his term as Governor, the capital was moved from Corydon to Indianapolis. He resigned as Governor in 1825 to serve in the U.S. Senate, where he remained until 1837. He was the uncle of Thomas Hendricks, who was elected Governor of Indiana in 1873. Hendricks died in 1850.

James Brown Ray, February 12, 1825 - December 7, 1831

James Brown Ray fulfilled Hendricks' unexpired term before being elected to his own two terms as Governor of Indiana. A lawyer and politician born in Kentucky in 1794, Ray utilized his administration to begin construction on Michigan Road, and the Wabash and Erie canals. He died in 1848.

Noah Noble, Whig Party, December 7, 1831 - December 6, 1837

Noah Noble was born in Virginia in 1794. A businessman, military man and politician, he served two terms as Governor. He died in 1844.

David Wallace, Whig Party, December 6, 1837 - December 9, 1840

Lieutenant Governor under Noble, David Wallace was born in Pennsylvania in 1799. He was a lawyer, politician and military man, as well as the father of Lew Wallace, author of Ben Hur. Wallace died in 1859.

Samuel Bigger, Whig Party, December 9, 1840 - December 6, 1843

Samuel Bigger was a lawyer and politician born in Ohio in 1802. He was defeated in his bid for reelection in 1843. He died in 1846.

James Whitcomb, Democrat, December 6, 1843 - December 26, 1848

Born in Vermont in 1795, James Whitcomb was a lawyer and politician. During his administration, he established the Indiana Hospital for the Insane, Indiana Asylum for Education of Deaf and Dumb and the Indiana Institute for the Blind. He resigned as Governor in 1848 to serve in the U.S. Senate until his death in 1852.

Paris Chipman Dunning, Democrat, December 26, 1848 - December 5, 1849

As Lieutenant Governor under Whitcomb, Paris Chipman Dunning finished out Whitcomb's unexpired term. He was born in North Carolina in 1806 and he died in 1884.

Joseph Albert Wright, Democrat, December 5, 1849 - January 12, 1857

Joseph Albert Wright served one two-year term and, after a new constitution was instated, one four-year term. During his administration, the State Board of Education and the State Board of Agriculture were formed. Born in Pennsylvania in 1810, he served in the U.S. Senate from 1862 through 1863. He died in 1867.

Ashbel Parsons Willard, Democrat, January 12, 1857 - October 4, 1860

After serving as Lieutenant Governor under Wright, Ashbel Parsons Willard was elected Governor. The lawyer and politician was born in New York in 1820. He was the first Indiana Governor to die in office; he died in 1860.

Abram Adams Hammond, Democrat, October 4, 1860 - January 14, 1861

Born in Vermont in 1814, Abram Adams was a lawyer and politician who was elected Lieutenant Governor under Willard. He served out Willard's term after his death. Hammond died in 1874.

Henry Smith Lane, Republican, January 14, 1861 - January 16, 1861

Only two days after taking office, Henry Smith Lane resigned the Governorship of Indiana to become a U.S. Senator. A lawyer born in Kentucky in 1811, he helped form the Republican Party. Lane died in 1881.

Oliver Perry Morton, Republican, January 16, 1861 - January 23, 1867

Two days after being elected Lieutenant Governor under Lane, Oliver Perry Morton served out the term as Governor when Lane resigned. He was born in Salisbury, Indiana, in 1823, which made him the first native Hoosier to become Governor. He was elected for a second term in 1864 to serve during the Civil War years, until his resignation in 1867 to serve as a U.S. Senator. He died in 1877

Conrad Baker, Republican, January 23, 1867 - January 13, 1873

Conrad Baker was born in Pennsylvania in 1817. He was Lieutenant Governor during Morton's second term, finishing out the administration when Morton resigned, after which he was elected as Governor on his own. He died in 1885.

Thomas Andrews Hendricks, Democrat, January 13, 1873 - January 1877

Thomas Andrews Hendricks was born in Ohio in 1819. A lawyer and member of the Democratic Party, he was elected U.S. Vice President in 1884. He died in that office in 1885.

James Douglas Williams, Democrat, January 8, 1877 - November 20, 1880

A farmer, James Douglas Williams was nicknamed "Blue Jeans" because he always wore suits made of denim. He was born in Ohio in 1808 and served 31 years in the legislature. Williams also briefly served in Congress before being elected Governor of Indiana. He died in that office in 1880.

Isaac Pusey Gray, Democrat, November 20, 1880 - January 10, 1881 & January 12, 1885 - January 14, 1889

Isaac Pusey Gray was elected Lieutenant Governor under Williams and served out William's term after he died in 1880. He was elected Governor on his own in 1884. Born in Pennsylvania in 1828, he became minister to Mexico in 1893. He died in 1895.

Albert Gallatin Porter, Republican, January 10, 1881 - January 12, 1885

Born in Lawrenceburg, Indiana, in 1824, Albert Gallatin Porter served four years in Congress and four years as Comptroller of the U.S. Treasury before being elected Governor. He served as minister to Italy from 1889 to 1892. He died in 1897.

Alvin Peterson Hovey, Republican, January 14, 1889 - November 23, 1891

Alvin Peterson Hovey was a lawyer and military man with a distinguished career. He held various positions in state and national government before being elected Governor. He was born in Indiana in 1821 and died in office in 1891.

Law-Making Maze

START

BILL INTRODUCTION

The first step in creating a law is for a representative or senator to write the bill. Then the bill is read by the author in either the House or the Senate.

Follow the path through the maze to find out how a bill becomes a law!

CONFERENCE COMMITTEE

After the bill has been considered by both chambers, one of three things can happen: (A) The bill can be approved without changes; (B) The bill can be changed in the second chamber. If this happens, it must be returned to the first chamber so the changes can be approved. If at least 51 of the Representatives or 26 Senators agree to the changes, the bill goes on to the governor. However, if the majority of the original chamber disagrees with the amendments, the bill is sent to a conference committee. A conference committee is made up of two representatives and two senators. The four legislators attempt to combine the two different versions of the bill so that they all can agree. If they can agree, a conference report is then voted on by both the House and the Senate. If both houses approve the amended bill, it is sent to the governor. Otherwise the bill cannot become a law; or (C) The second chamber defeats the bill by not voting on it, defeating it by a vote in committee, or defeating the bill through a vote of the entire chamber.

THE GOVERNOR

Once a bill gets to this point, the governor can either sign the bill into law, veto the bill, or do nothing. If the governor does not act within seven days, the bill automatically becomes law without a signature.

FIRST READING

The bill is presented to the House or the Senate. Then the Speaker of the House or the President of the Senate (depending on whether the bill's author is a Representative or Senator) assigns it to a committee.

THIRD READING

At this stage, the full House or Senate will talk about what is good and not so good about a bill. Then legislators will vote to pass or defeat the bill. A majority of at least 51 votes are needed for the bill to be passed in the House; at least 26 in the Senate. If the bill is passed, it is sent to the other chamber, where everything starts all over. If not enough people vote to pass the bill, it cannot become a law. Both the House and the Senate have to go through the same process before a bill can become a law.

COMMITTEE READING

The committee's responsibility is to decide what is good about a bill as well as talk about any changes that could be made. Anyone can attend a committee meeting to say what they like or don't like about a bill. After the committee meeting is over, the members report back to the House or Senate. If the committee does not vote or votes against the bill, the bill cannot become a law.

SECOND READING

When the bill is brought before the House or Senate for a second reading, legislators have the opportunity to ask for amendments to the bill. The Senators or Representatives may or may not get what they ask for.

VETO OVERRIDE

Even if the governor vetos a bill, it can still become a law if 51 representatives and 26 senators vote to override the governor's veto.

IF A BILL MAKES IT THIS FAR, IT BECOMES A LAW!!!
